

Professor John McDonald, director of the Center for Urban Real Estate, was quoted in a Chicago Tribune article on the outlook for business real estate in Chicago and the suburbs.

"The forecast for the coming year hinges on office employment continuing to expand. The question is whether the economy heads into a general recession."

Professor John Binder, author of Chicago Outfit, was interviewed by ABC7 news for a story about the release of Al Capone's IRS records.

First Business Morning News interviewed Professor George Roe for a segment about the ramifications associated with New York State Governor Eliot Spitzer's case.

"In the 1840s, it was the railways, and in the 1920s it was automobiles, Now people say, 'Oh housing is more fundamental and this is a whole new thing,' but these things happen, and these things always level out."

Professor Deirdre McCloskey was quoted in a FOXBusiness.com article regarding the nation's current subprime mortgage crisis.

Rita Bieliauskas, director of admissions at the Liautaud Graduate School of Business, talked about business schools actively recruiting military veterans in a special Advance education guide in the Chicago Tribune.

Professor Frank Chaloupka was quoted in a Daily Free Press article regarding a proposed $1-per-pack Massachusetts cigarette tax increase.

An article in the Wall Street Journal referenced findings from a new study on divorce by Professor Evelyn Lehrer.

The divorce rate falls as the age of marriage rises through the late 20s, then levels off.

CBA alumnus Curtis Granderson was profiled in the Chicago Tribune. Granderson, a former Flames baseball player, is the starting center fielder for the Detroit Tigers.

Professor David Koehler appeared on WGN Radio's Noon Show with Bob Sirott to discuss online social networking and its impact in the workplace.

Professor Nathan Anderson was featured in the April edition of Chicago magazine in a story about state and local taxes.

Joseph DeLaGarza, director of the Center for Urban Business, appeared on the Noon Show with Bob Sirott to talk about the current climate for business in the city of Chicago and the services offered by CUB.

A variety of local print and broadcast media outlets, including WGN Radio, covered the recent Chicago Area Entrepreneurship Hall of Fame induction ceremony hosted by the UIC Institute for Entrepreneurial Studies.