Carlson, M. (2002). Winning grants step by step. 2ed. San Francisco: Jossey-Bass.

"The information contained in this book primarily applies to non-governmental entities soliciting grants from non-profit foundations. Organizations like the NSF, NIH, etc., have fairly strict guidelines and don't permit the "excesses" encouraged in this book. As the review title states, this would probably be a very useful book for a charitable organization looking to obtain funds from corporate foundations."

Warwick, M., & Hitchcock, S. (2002). Ten steps to fundraising success: Choosing the right strategy for your organization. San Francisco: Jossey-Bass.

"Mal Warwick shows nonprofit executives how to take the lessons of the 'real business' world and apply them to the nonprofit sector. . . . He offers a pragmatic, no-nonsense, businesslike approach to the big business of asking for money."

Bauer, David G. (2003). The "How To" Grants Manual: Successful Grantseeking Techniques for Obtaining Public and Private Grants, 5th edition. Westport CT: American Council on Education and Greenwood Publishing Group. (ISBN: 0-275-98070-7 or new DOI: 10.1336/0275980707)

"Bauer's manual has become a standard in its field. If a library can only purchase one book on developing grant proposals, this one should be at or very near the top of the list."
