

Julie Globokar
jglobo1@uic.edu
2nd year of graduate studies

My general area of interest lies in how criminal and psychological theory can inform our response to crime. Specifically, I am interested in the history and use of probation; the utilization of group counseling as a treatment technique; the effects of labeling offenders (i.e. community notification laws for sex offenders); and the consequences of current policies and discourse surrounding incarceration.