On November 1, John R. Lumpkin MD, Sr. VP and Director of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Health Care Group (and a UIC alumnus) will visit the UIC campus. You are invited to attend a 90 minute morning presentation by Dr. Lumpkin on Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's current programs, followed by a 30 minute Q&A session to help faculty clarify RWJF priorities and funding guidelines.

Robert Wood Johnson Foundation has funded several important programs on campus that relate to its broad mission to improve the health and health care of all Americans. Past RWJF grant recipients have come from many colleges, including Public Health, Nursing, Dentistry, Business, LAS, and CUPPA. Current RWJF programs include a new $500 million funding initiative to prevent childhood obesity. To explore any of RWJF's seven program areas, use the links below:
