3. <http://www.downloadhelper.net>

The main content area is titled "Welcome to DownloadHelper" and includes a sidebar with a "FAQ" section containing links for Manual, Video tutorials, Installation, and Video sites. The main text describes the extension as a way to discover and download web videos, highlighting its ease of use and support for various video formats. A prominent yellow banner with a filmstrip border reads "DOWNLOADHELPER CAN NOW DOWNLOAD VIDEOS" and includes a "CLICK HERE FOR DETAILS" button and the text "DIRECTLY TO YOUR PREFERRED FORMAT".

On the right side, there is a "User comments" section with three testimonials:

- Porcupinepie wrote: Simply Brilliant and best of all brilliantly simple. An easy way to determine how well a product is designed is to take it out of the box and attempt to use it immediately. If you can use it without blowing anything up, then you have a well designed, user-friendly product. DownloadHelper passes this (my) test and more. Recommended!
- Squishyfishy wrote: Love it. Get it.
Love it. Get it. It's so good I don't have to elaborate... its safe, easy to download (literally takes a minute).
- Mimot wrote: Extremely Good
I've installed this on all four family PC's on the network. Works perfectly with approx. 98% of all the sites in my experience. Many thanks for this excellent piece of software.

Below the testimonials is a "See in action" section with two video thumbnails and a link for "More DownloadHelper videos". The footer contains copyright information: "Copyright (c) 2007-2008 www.downloadhelper.net - Privacy policy - Contact us".
