

O.J. Simpson Ten Years Later: Violence & Sexual Assault Against Women

The DePaul University College of Law Schiller DuCanto & Fleck Family Law Center invites you to attend The 2nd Annual Valentine's Day Distinguished Family Violence

Lecture:

Monday, February 14, 2005

Lecture: 3:00 - 4:00 p.m.

Reception: 4:15 - 5:00 p.m.

DePaul Egan Urban Center, 243 S. Wabash, 9th floor

In 1995, during the trial of O.J. Simpson, the entire nation was focused on the issue of domestic violence. Now, ten years later, it has all but disappeared as a critical issue. Lynn Rosenthal will address the growing invisibility of the issue of violence and sexual assault against women, the reasons for this situation, the lack of national leadership and its effects, and specific emerging policy issues and challenges in the current reality of indifference and fiscal cutbacks. In her role as director of the National Network to End Domestic Violence Fund, Rosenthal serves as the chief advocate for battered women and victims of sexual assault in our nation's capital.

No RSVP is necessary.

For further information see attached flyer or contact: Jody Raphael at 312.362.5205.