

Fight for Public Education

Jinny Sims

Past President

British Columbia Teachers' Federation

In October 2005, the British Columbia Teachers' Federation staged an "illegal" two-week walkout to fight for just learning conditions for their students, better working conditions, and the right to bargain collectively. Throughout the strike, the teachers received overwhelming support from students, parents and the community. More than 30,000 teachers stood strong and won their demands.

Jinny Sims, BCTF past president, led this historic struggle and is coming to Chicago to share how they did it, and the important role teachers have in fighting for social justice and a fair and decent public education.
