Hanna Cooper, MPH, CPCC, ACC is a certified professional coach who works with emerging and existing leaders to maximize individual, team and organizational effectiveness.

Before starting her coaching business in 2004, Hanna spent more than a decade in leadership, management and program development for local and state public health agencies and non-profit organizations. In addition to her work as leadership and team coach, Hanna also designs and delivers interactive workshops on coaching and leadership skills, as well as consults on strategic planning and facilitation projects with a variety of organizations.

As a coach, Hanna specializes in assisting new and established leaders connect with their professional passion and purpose, align their actions with their values and priorities, and ultimately make greater lasting impact in both their professional and personal lives. Through working with Hanna, her clients have assumed new or increased job responsibilities with greater confidence and ease, consciously created more productive working relationships, and successfully leveraged organizational conflict to enact positive change. Clients consistently praise Hanna's intuitive and authentic style as a coach, combined with a powerful combination of integrity, honesty, and fierce dedication to their success.

Hanna's education and training includes a masters' degree in public health (MPH) with a focus on health behavior and health education from the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill. She is also a graduate of and former mentor for the Public Health Education Leadership Institute. She completed individual coaching training, certification (CPCC), and advanced training in team and system coaching from The Coaches Training Institute of San Rafael, CA. Hanna has also earned Associate Certified Coach (ACC) certification from the International Coach Federation.
